Question(s) Received:

Question #1:

Is the RDOS open to amending the project timeline?

Answer #1:

The 'scheduling' portion of the proposal evaluation is 5 of 100 potential points and will be evaluated as per the following excerpt from pg. 19 of the RFP:

(iv) Scheduling

Does the Proposal indicate that the achievement of objectives will be met according to an acceptable schedule? Are they within the timelines set by the terms of reference (if outlined in the terms of reference) Are problems or delays accounted for? Is timing realistic for the project?

In an effort to clarify, it should not be assumed that the grading of the 'scheduling' portion will be performed solely considering how the proponents schedule matches up with what was suggested within the RFP – If the prospective proponent's proposed schedule is a revision to what was suggested and clearly articulates the rationale and benefits behind the revision, those proposals may in fact receive preferential grading.
